We disparage no man's amateur standing, but it's pretty easy for a star halfback to work his way through college.—Atchison Globe.

It is beginning to look as though it would take more than the support of Herr Munsterberg to kill off the big Roosevelt boom.—Boston Transcript.

Arizona has been smitten, or bitten, by the annexation germ and wants a slice of northern Mexico. Not any of that, if you please!—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Again the United States stands awestruck over the affairs just across the border in Mexico. Isn't it just about time that something of a definite character should be done?—Amarillo Panhandle.

Wanton murder of Americans abroad will never sit well on the old folks at home; still the sending along of a military expedition wherever an American may ramble is a good big contract.—Knoxville Sentinel.

Christy Mathewson says that a day off each week would keep baseball players in the game longer. All the same, it is having too many off days in the week that ultimately puts a ball player out of the game.—Providence Journal.

Orville McPherson has received a message from Beaver Dam, Pa., that his mother, a former resident of this city, is dead.

THOMAS MORRIS HAS HIS 121ST BIRTHDAY

Thomas Morris, said to be the oldest man in the world, celebrated his one hundred and twenty-first birthday last Saturday at his home two and a half miles east of Westerville, Nebraska. He is in excellent health and a bachelor, living with a relative there named Charles Mytton, on a stock farm. It is said the loss of a sweet heart confirmed Morris in his determination never to marry and neighbors say he appears to be a woman hater. He seldom talks and his only "bad" habits are to get up in the middle of the night and drink a quart of strong, cold coffee and smoking constantly. He was born in Berrew, Montgomeryshire, North Wales, January 15, 1794, and came to the United States in 1871. He passed through Chicago the Sunday after the fire. He was a shoemaker for ten years at Blackstone, Ill., and settled in Westerville, Custer county, Nebraska, in 1886.

People's candies are wholesome, pure and sweet. President Wilson would think them a treat.

DARK HINTS OF CANNIBALISM

Still Heard in the Congo—Grubworms and Caterpillars Staples of Diet.

Caterpillars, ants and grubworms are among the delicacies of diet most pleasing to the natives of the Belgian Congo, says John A. Stockwell, a Southern Methodist missionary stationed at Wembo Niama, in the heart of darkest Africa, a thousand miles from the coast. Ants are the favorite and are eaten in great quantity, taking the place occupied by the watermelon in the esteem of the African in America.

A few of the common vegetables and cereals are grown for food, among them being corn, millet, rice, peanuts, plantain, cassava and sweet potatoes. Of flesh foods fish, antelope and chicken are the most common, being served, says Mr. Stockwell, "pretty well along toward decomposition."

The eating of human flesh, formerly a common occurrence, is of course forbidden by the Belgian government, and, if discovered, would be severely punished. Dark hints are still sometimes heard, however, of the secret practice of cannibalism.

"I asked our head carpenter," says Mr. Stockwell, "what would happen to a man walking alone in the woods if two or three from another village should find him. He replied that the a man would be in danger of being eaten. Afterward I put the same question to one of our houseboys and got the same answer. They are so secretive about their customs that there could have been combined feasts right here in Wembo Niama since our arrival without our knowledge. I must say however, in justice to the people, that I do not think there have been."

Doctors Refuse to Attend Typhus Patients

Rev. C. L. Neal, a Southern Baptist missionary in Mexico, writes of conditions in his town:

"There has been an epidemic of typhoid, typhus and smallpox here. A great many Mexican doctors refuse to visit the patients with typhus fever since two of the doctors died of it. A judge sick with typhus called in a priest to confess him; the priest took it, and called in a doctor; the priest died, the doctor who waited on him died, the doctor who attended doctor No. 1 died. Mrs. Neal has waited on a number and has not taken it yet. There have been as many as ten in a family sick with it at one time. The Mexicans are more afraid of typhus than any thing else. We have one hundred and sixty deaths here in one week from it."

The Missionary's Great Example.

And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom and healing all manner of sickness. But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them because they were distressed and scattered as sheep not having a shepherd. Then said he unto his disciples, the harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9: 35-38.

A Methodist layman in St. Louis, who receives a salary of $25,000 a year, began five years ago to tithe his income. He now puts 50 per cent of his salary into his regular contributions for the kingdom besides all special gifts. Recently on purchasing an automobile, the first he had had in his family, his household had family prayers in the morning to dedicate the machine to the use of God, and with petitions that they might be kept from using it in any way to retard the Kingdom of Christ.

RAIN IN YUMA MEANS A DELUGE OUTSIDE

Whenever it rains in Yuma it's a safe bet that all the balance of the world is about half flooded. It rained here yesterday, and flooded all the Los Angeles country to such an extent that railroads, telegraph and telephone lines were washed out at several places.

Is your best friend in times of financial distress. It is a bank's business to lend money. We have always aimed to take good care of our customers, granting them every accommodation which is consistent with their business standing and responsibility. Can we not serve you?

TO SUM UP

All the advantages of using gas for light, heat and cooking is almost impossible. Increased convenience, lessened cost for fuel, added safety, more cleanliness are only a few of them. But they alone should make you think seriously of adopting gas. Do they?
